Description: The National Library of Ireland is actively creating an Irish web archive. The NLI recognises the intrinsic cultural value of information published on the web and the need to preserve this material for current and future generations. It is also an opportunity to work with Born-Digital collections and to enable users to work with the NLI collections, in new and innovative ways. The NLI has archived the Irish web on a selective basis since 2011. You can search and access these websites from here. Please note that websites archived before September 2018 are not displayed as collections. They currently can be viewed here in the collection "National Library of Ireland Collections 2011-2018". More information on these collections here: https://www.nli.ie/en/udlist/web-archive-collections.aspx.
